

Modules and marks: Compare your universities!

Pre-task:

Have a look online to see which modules the home university of your partner is offering in (one of) your subjects.

Discuss which of the modules you would like to study and to what extent the modules on offer are similar to or different from your own university.

Image 1

Task 1:

Try to explain to each other how the grade system at your universities works. What is the highest mark you can achieve? What is the pass mark, i.e. the mark needed to pass the module?

Task 2:

Compare which marks at your universities count towards the final degree. Discuss whether you think all marks should count.

At many British universities, for example, all marks count apart from marks gained in the first year of study. Do you consider this a good model?

Sources

Image 1

Copyright: College of Humanities, University of Exeter